

The time for the National Buyer/Seller Forum (NBSF) is once again upon us, and will take place 10-12 February 2009 at the Shaw Conference Centre in Edmonton, Alberta. As Canada's premier supply chain management event, the NBSF is a key opportunity to seek out new supply contacts, become active in new projects and make important contacts to strengthen your organization.

A significant part of NBSF 2009 will again be the One-on-One Meetings, where buyers can meet with suppliers and sellers over a two-day period, in order to maximize business development opportunities. For the 2009 edition of the NBSF we've enhanced the One-on-One Meetings in the following ways:

- Meetings can be scheduled throughout the entire day, rather than just the afternoons.
- Select the companies you only want to meet with, using more rigorous and selective search criteria based on your registration requirements.
- Book a meeting space – $1,000 per table per day, and for as many tables as you require – in order to maximize your scheduling flexibility.
- As part of your meeting space booking fee, two FREE Full Forum registrations will be provided for every meeting table booked – a total value of $1,575

It's clear – the benefits for you as a Buyer are there for the taking. But what do our meeting hosts have to say about the One-on-Ones? Dave Rider, with Shell Canada, said the following about his experience at the Forum and the One-on-One meetings:

"I find the One-on-One meetings are a great forum for focused discussion between buyers and sellers with the potential to match compatible companies. In my experience, these meetings have made the process of screening new opportunities more effective and efficient."

"The National Buyer/Seller Forum provides valuable learning and networking experiences for companies from across Canada, resulting in new market and partnering opportunities across many industry sectors."
